shot down. Was the UFO that crashed at Roswell, New Mexico, indeed shot down?

A. No, it deliberately crashed.

Q. You have said that the Roswell UFO crash in 1947 was "a deliberate sacrifice" on the part of the Martian crew. Recently, Lockheed Martin senior research scientist Boyd Bushman stated that he knows who flew the fighter plane from which the UFO was restraints were recovered with the craft. Chase Brandon, who worked for the CIA for 35 years, visited a special section of CIA headquarters in the mid-1990s called the Historical Intelligence Collection.

"One day, I was looking around in there and reading some of the titles that were mostly hand-scribbled summations of what was in the boxes," Brandon said. "And there was one box that really caught my eye. It had one word on it: Roswell. I took the box down, lifted the lid up, rummaged around inside it, put the box back on the shelf and said, 'My god, it really happened!'"

Although Brandon will not reveal exactly what was in the box, he said it contained "Some written material and some photographs, and that's all I will ever say to anybody about the contents of that box. But it absolutely, for me, was the single validating moment that everything I had believed, and knew that so many other people believed had happened, truly was what occurred."

"It was a craft that clearly did not come from this planet, it crashed and I don't doubt for a second that the use of the word 'remains' and 'cadavers' was exactly what people were talking about." (Source: huffingtonpost.com)

Q. Can spaceships be shot down by our weapons? Do spaceships ever crash?

A. Spaceships cannot be shot down by our weapons because each ship has around it a magnetic field which rejects every weapon; it can put weapons off course. The spaceships are impenetrable. They are literally invulnerable; however, several times in the past the Space People have sacrificed themselves in a simulated crash of their vehicle such as the Roswell incident. This is a measure of the extraordinary love which is behind their work for humanity. It is truly a spiritual mission – even to the point of self-sacrifice carried out in a way which I don't think this planet would be able to repeat.

Q. Did the scientists who examined the bodies and spacecraft from the Roswell incident in New Mexico, in 1947, keep DNA samples and were they able to analyse and store the chemical constituents of material from the craft and also the clothing worn by the Roswell space people? Does this DNA and other information still exist?

A. Yes. They tried to analyse the DNA but the bodies very quickly reverted to the etheric state. The clothing remained, however, and has been examined and stored.
